Report Card on the Human Rights of LGBTQI Peoples

OVERVIEW

Inclusive democracies value the democratic, economic, and social contributions of all citizens. Indeed, democracy itself cannot thrive unless the human rights of all people are protected, and this must include protections for often marginalized lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, and intersex (LGBTQI) peoples. Advancing rights for the protection of LGBTQI people is also closely correlated to broader democratic dividends, including efforts to address democratic backsliding, fight corruption, and build resilient movements to fight authoritarianism. These themes of the Summit for Democracy are also themes of LGBTQI movements around the world.

This report card provides a concise measurement of the attainment of core human rights protections for LGBTQI individuals. It sets the collective standard for participating states' core legal obligations toward LGBTQI peoples and consequently the ability of LGBTQI citizens to contribute to and benefit from democratic institutions. Countries are graded on three dimensions: Basic Rights, Protection from Violence, and Socio-economic rights. Only one state has achieved all benchmarks. The Summit for Democracy signals the start of a year of action when all states will have an opportunity to demonstrate progress in advancing the human rights and democratic participation of LGBTQI peoples.

The report card is based on 2020 baseline data and will be updated during the year of action to reflect advances over the coming year, culminating in a 2022 report at the end of the Summit process.

METHODOLOGY

The LGBTQI Human Rights Report Card measures the extent to which countries attending the 2021 Summit for Democracy protect the human rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, and intersex people.

The report card tracks 30 items, divided into three dimensions representing fundamental human rights:

Dimension I: Basic Rights

Dimension II: Protection from Violence

Dimension III: Socio-Economic Rights

The report card utilizes the same methodology as the Franklin and Marshall Global Barometers: Items are scored on a binary scale, assigned a "1" or "0" based on a country's positive or negative performance on each item. To receive credit, protections must be secured at the national level; partial protections in a limited number of states, cities, or sub-national jurisdictions will not receive credit.

Countries are assigned three subscores based on their performance on each dimension and are graded on a 5-point scale: Excellent, Good, Fair, Poor, and Failing.

The binary scale enables consistent comparison between countries on a broad scale. Feedback is welcome and encouraged.

The report card items are based on 2020 baseline data.
